The car was introduced at the 1952 Earls Court Motor Show in London as a prototype, and it immediately generated a lot of interest from the public. The 100/4 was designed by Donald Healey, who was an experienced racing driver and car designer. The car was built on a steel chassis and featured a sleek aluminum body with distinctive styling. It was powered by a 2.6-liter four-cylinder engine that produced 90 horsepower, which was quite impressive for a car (...)
