DESCRIPTION ET EQUIPEMENTS

Full aluminium body panels Original BMW parts Drives sublime In the challenging post-WWII era in Germany, life was tough—limited food, energy, and rationed petrol made for a dreary existence. Amidst all this, the joy of fun, especially in the form of motor racing, seemed impossible. Development of new racing cars was restricted to engines under 1 litre, adding another layer to the gloom. Yet, the spirit of petrolheads prevailed, and Ernst Loof, the former head of BMW's prewar motor racing department, was one such enthusiast. Responsible for BMW's 1939 Mille Miglia victory with the iconic streamlined coupe, Loof faced restrictions on developing new racing cars. Undeterred, he decided to craft something extraordinary from used, pre-war machinery, avoiding any (...)
