DESCRIPTION ET EQUIPEMENTS

Legendary powerhouse Collector's item Porsche-collaboration In the late 1980s, Mercedes' management decided they wanted to give BMW a run for its money with a new rival to their M5, based on the acclaimed W124 E-Class. Mercedes' new M5 rival was in many ways a successor to the 300 SEL 6.3 and similarly needed to combine the comfort of a luxury sedan with the performance of a sports car. Because the Mercedes plant was running at maximum capacity and the company was not really prepared for a low-volume production model, a partner organization was sought to help with development and production. A deal was struck in which Porsche was commissioned to act as subcontractor for what became known as "Project 2758. Porsche was responsible for virtually all the integration (...)
